

Kohinoor diamond's association with British Crown

September 17, 2022

In news- After the death of Queen Elizabeth II, the formal coronation ceremony of the King Charles III will see him wear the Imperial State Crown for the first time & Kohinoor diamond will also be part of Crown Jewels.

The UK Crown Jewels-

- They are the ceremonial treasures which have been acquired by English kings and queens, mostly since 1660.
- The collection is at the Tower of London and includes the crowns acquired by various monarchs, their robes, and other items of great historical value.
- The regalia is used for rare, ceremonial occasions.
- The Kohinoor diamond was embedded in the crown of Queen Elizabeth's mother, Queen Elizabeth I, for the coronation ceremony of her husband King George VI in 1937.
- She wore it again during her daughter's coronation in 1953. During her funeral procession in 2002, it was placed atop her coffin.
- The crown has been worn by her as the Queen Consort, the person who is married to the King but is not a queen through the line of succession.
- According to reports in the British media, Charles's wife Camilla will wear it next as the new Queen Consort.
- The Queen Consort is usually crowned with the King, in a similar but simpler ceremony .

Journey of Kohinoor from India to Britain-

- Famed as a shiny, big diamond, the Kohinoor, Persian for 'Mountain of Light', is counted among the largest precious stones in the world.
- There is some disagreement over where and when it was mined, but it is generally believed to have its origins in India, in the Golconda mines(Kollur Mine) of present-day Andhra Pradesh and Telangana.
- It was found during the period of the Kakatiya dynasty, who placed it in the Bhadrakali Temple in Warangal.
- Since its discovery, the stone has moved from king to king. It was placed on the Mughal Emperor Shah Jahan's famous Peacock Throne at the Red Fort in Delhi in the 17th century.
- Following the invasions of Iranian ruler Nadir Shah, the Kohinoor was taken away from India, and it finally reached the Afghan invader Ahmad Shah Durrani.
- In the 19th century, it went to Maharaja Ranjit Singh, the founder of the Sikh empire, who had his capital in Lahore.
- After the Second Anglo-Sikh War of 1849, the kingdom of Punjab was annexed by the East India Company, and the child king Duleep Singh was forced to give up the diamond to Queen Victoria.
- The movement of the diamond through its history has made the claims for its return contentious.
- Afghanistan and Pakistan, as well as India, have at various points demanded it from the British government.

 Koh-i-Noor, set into the crown worn by the queens of England, is now on display in the Tower of London.	 Koh-i-Noor was found in Ganpur, Andhra Pradesh during the Kalchuri Dynasty. It was used as one eye of the deity in a Hindu temple in Warangal in 1300.	 Malik Kafur, Alauddin Khalji's general, looted Koh-i-Noor during a raid on Warangal. Koh-i-Noor passed on to the ruler of the Delhi Sultanate from the Khalji Dynasty.
 Queen Elizabeth 1906-2002	 Babur, founder of Mughal Empire, possessed Koh-i-Noor after the first Battle of Panipat in 1526. Then his son Humayun inherited it.	 Shah Jahan, fifth Mughal Emperor, used Koh-i-Noor to adorn the Peacock Throne.
 Queen Mary 1847 - 1953	 When he was imprisoned in Agra Fort by his son Aurangzeb, he used to see Taj Mahal's reflection by Koh-i-Noor placed near a window.	 Madar Shah from Persia looted both Koh-i-Noor and Peacock Throne during his invasion of Agra and Delhi in 1739.
 Queen Alexandra 1844-1902		On 1 July 1850, Koh-i-Noor reached Portsmouth, then it travelled to London. It was presented to Queen Victoria on 9 July.
 Queen Victoria 1819 - 1901	 After Nadir Shah's assassination in 1747, Koh-i-Noor came into the hands of his general, Ahmed Shah Durrani, the Emir of Afghanistan.	Koh-i-Noor came to Bombay from Calcutta and was sealed in an iron safe for shipping to England. But it had a difficult voyage.
On 1 July 1850, Koh-i-Noor reached Portsmouth, then it travelled to London. It was presented to Queen Victoria on 9 July.		In 1830, Shujah Shah Durrani, the deposed Emir of Afghanistan and a descendant of Ahmed Shah Durrani, fled with Koh-i-Noor to Lahore.
 Lord Dalhousie asked Dulep Singh, Maharaja Ranjit Singh's youngest son, to present Koh-i-Noor to Queen Victoria. Dulep Singh travelled to Calcutta in 1850.	 Ranjit Maharaja Ranjit Singh possessed Koh-i-Noor in Lahore and came to Punjab. He wished to donate it to Puri's Lord Jagannath temple in Odisha. But the British occupied it after his death in 1839.	