About the Prize-

- It is an award for achievements in newspaper, magazine, online journalism, literature and musical composition within the United States.
- It was established in 1917 by provisions in the will of Joseph Pulitzer, who had made his fortune as a newspaper publisher, and is administered by Columbia University.
- Prizes are awarded yearly in twenty-one categories.
- In twenty of the categories, each winner receives a certificate and a US$15,000 cash award (raised from $10,000 in 2017).
- The winner in the public service category is awarded a gold medal.
- The awards are made in categories relating to journalism, arts, letters and fiction.
- Reports and photographs by United States-based newspapers, magazines and news organizations (including news websites) that “[publish] regularly” are eligible for the journalism prize.
- In December 2008, it was announced that for the first time content published in online-only news sources would be considered.
- In 2015, magazines were allowed to enter for the first time in two categories (Investigative Reporting and Feature Writing).
- By 2016, this provision had expanded to three additional categories (International Reporting, Criticism and Editorial Cartooning).
- In October 2016, magazine eligibility was extended to all journalism categories.
- Hitherto confined to the local reporting of breaking news, the Breaking News Reporting category was expanded to encompass all domestic breaking news events in 2017.
