

What is Compassion Fatigue?

March 3, 2023

In news– Online depictions of tragic events, offensive news etc. have all contributed to an increase in compassion fatigue cases in recent years.

About compassion fatigue-

- Compassion fatigue is a condition characterized by emotional and physical exhaustion leading to a diminished ability to empathize or feel compassion for others, often described as the negative cost of caring. It is sometimes referred to as secondary traumatic stress.
- The phenomenon, known as compassion fatigue, or empathy burnout, causes us to lose our capacity to react and help those in need.
- Compassion is an unstable emotion. It needs to be translated into action, or it withers.
- The underlying psychological mechanism behind compassion fatigue is desensitization.
- Violence in digital media formats like video games and films can desensitize people's responses to suffering or violence in real life.
- it's a kind of emotional or attentional filtering that protects us from suffering becoming too stressful or traumatic to cope with.
- However, compassion fatigue can be reversed.
